Putting together a posthumous collection is always a chancy proposition. How does anyone decide what to include and what to pass over? In this case, 22 stories were selected, showcasing a broad spectrum of John Buscema's talent. There are several pieces from different stages of the artist's early career, two horror stories, two humorous pieces (one "straight", one cartoony) and a romance tale, in addition to the "Avengers," "Thor," and "Silver Surfer" stories he was known for. The choices are curious. I enjoyed the "Nick Fury" story -- it was interesting seeing Buscema musculature over Kirby layouts -- but I thought the 3-part Hulk story unnecessary and not a good example of his work. And why include a romance story that is so horribly inked? (It's not like it's that well-written.) I suppose licensing agreements precludes printing the "Conan" and "Tarzan" stories Buscema preferred doing. But why didn't they print those two great "Spider-Man" stories he drew? Or "Weirdworld"? or another "Silver Surfer"? (You get the picture.) With an artist with SO MUCH really good stuff, the inclusion of a couple of substandard stories is strange. Despite the occasional clunker, I am happy with this book overall.

The Incredible Hulk, the devastating Dragon Man, the epic end of the gods themselves... none of it was too much for Big John! One of comicdom's most acclaimed creators takes center stage in this genre-spanning gathering of greats! Nick Fury vs. Hydra! Thor vs. the Silver Surfer! The origins of Wolverine and Dracula! The twilight of the Masters of Evil! Includes crime, horror, romance and western work from the pre-Marvel era! Plus: rare Silver Surfer stories unseen for decades! Collects Crime Fighters #4; Western Outlaws Sheriffs #60; Strange Tales #22 #150; Tales To Astonish #85-87; Avengers #41-42, #75-76, #277 Annual #2; Silver Surfer #4; My Love #2; Fantastic Four #111-112; Thor #200; Dracula Lives #3; Marvel Spotlight #30; Epic Illustrated #1; Wolverine #10 and Marvel Shadows Light #3
